WEEKLY LESSON PLANS

|              | MONDAY | TUESDAY | WEDNESDAY | THURSDAY | FRIDAY |
|--------------|--------|---------|-----------|----------|--------|
|              | /      | /       | /         | /        | /      |
| L            |        |         |           |          |        |
|              |        |         |           |          |        |
| BIBLE        |        |         |           |          |        |
| DIDLE        |        |         |           |          |        |
|              |        |         |           |          |        |
|              |        |         |           |          |        |
|              |        |         |           |          |        |
|              |        |         |           |          |        |
| READING  |        |         |           |          |        |
| WRITING      |        |         |           |          |        |
| LATIN and    |        |         |           |          |        |
| GRAMMAR      |        |         |           |          |        |
|              |        |         |           |          |        |
|              |        |         |           |          |        |
|              |        |         |           |          |        |
|              |        |         |           |          |        |
|              |        |         |           |          |        |
|              |        |         |           |          |        |
| MATH         |        |         |           |          |        |
|              |        |         |           |          |        |
|              |        |         |           |          |        |
|              |        |         |           |          |        |
| F            |        |         |           |          |        |
|              |        |         |           |          |        |
| SPELLING and |        |         |           |          |        |
| PENMANSHIP   |        |         |           |          |        |
|              |        |         |           |          |        |
|              |        |         |           |          |        |
|              |        |         |           |          |        |
| SCIENCE      |        |         |           |          |        |
| HISTORY and  |        |         |           |          |        |
| GEOGRAPHY    |        |         |           |          |        |
|              |        |         |           |          |        |
|              |        |         |           |          |        |
| F            |        |         |           |          |        |
| ART          |        |         |           |          |        |
| MUSIC and    |        |         |           |          |        |
| LANGUAGES    |        |         |           |          |        |
|              |        |         |           |          |        |
| PHYSICAL     |        |         |           |          |        |
| EDUCATION/   |        |         |           |          |        |
| PRESCHOOL    |        |         |           |          |        |
| PLANS/APPTS  |        |         |           |          |        |

Copyright 1997 Melanie Young Permission to copy for the purchaser's or tester's in home use is hereby granted.

Notes on Using the Weekly Lesson Planner

These are the simple, no muss, no fuss forms I designed for my own use early in our homeschooling. They aren't fancy, but they work!

This version has subjects down the left, so that you can tell at a glance what each student should be doing in each subject.

To record assignments, I use an initial or two for each child, then the text, then the day's assignment. An assignment for Matt in Saxon Math 54 for lesson 8 would look like this: M/S54/8. If I had two children with the same initial, I'd use their middle initial, too, like this: MH/S54/8. Do what works for you, though.

When you have combined subjects (and you should in everything except math and language arts for younger students, I just write ALL instead of a student's initial (or Ygr to signify younger students only) to record the subjects that we are doing together so I don't have to rewrite them for each subject.

I use the final row to record preschool activities, physical activities, field trips, or appointments coming up.

Melanie